On celebrating being found

By WILLIAM L. TRIMYER
CELEBRATING OUR BEING FOUND
Lesson for January 23, 1983
Bible Study Passage: Luke 15:11-32
INTRODUCTION

What a world we live in! A world of sin, suffering, hospitals, hostages, institutions for the aged and emotionally troubled, war, greed, violence, and prejudice. How can we even think of celebration in the midst of such human misery? How can we talk about celebrating our being found when we feel so lost much of the time?

The parable Jesus told of the Prodigal Son is a classic in biblical literature and human memory. Here is a story of a father who was able to celebrate the return of his lost son who had squandered his inheritance in foolish behavior. This Prodigal Son acted so foolishly, yet still managed to receive a party in honor of his return from his foolish wanderings.

Have you ever done something foolish? I have. We all have. We all have "played the fool" and found ourselves regretting our actions. Did you ever feel so foolish about your behavior that you thought forgiveness would never be in order? I suspect most of us have been in a pit like that we thought there would never be another party for us. But the good news of God is that through his forgiveness and love we are acceptable.

A Son Who Strayed [Luke 15:11-24]

The focus of this parable is the father's forgiveness, not the Prodical's misbehavior. Yet the boy's actions are enough to try the patience of any parent. You can imagine this wandering child returning home empty-handed and empty-hearted. The father of this son could have reacted with rage over the loss of money he had been smart enough to accumulate and the Prodigal dumb enough to lose.

The younger son in the parable came to his father and said something like this: "Old man, I wish you were dead. Give me now what I would get if your will were probated." Such words must have cut very deep. Here was his son asking for an early inheritance, but also rejecting his family, home, values, and heritage his father tried to instill in him over the years.

Surely this father wondered, just as we parents may wonder from time to time, where he had failed as a father to his son. But this same father turns around and throws a party for his long, lost son.

The father's reaction is moving and instructive. In our society we tend to bless only those who succeed, not those who fail. Yet this father is able to bless even a failure. "How could he do such a thing?" we may ask. The answer lies in his ability to get outside himself and openly receive the gift of his son's return. He surely did not ignore his anger, but he set aside his personal feelings in order to celebrate his son's homecoming.

A Son Who Stayed [Luke 15:25-32]

Picture the older son walking home from the fields of labor. As he draws nearer to home he hears the laughter and sounds of a party. He hears music, dancing, and, as he walks into the yard, he sees tables laden with food. "What going on?" he mutters to himself. He soon learns that his brother has returned and that his father has thrown a party to celebrate his coming home. The older son is furious.

The older son was so wrapped up in his own concerns that he could not celebrate his brother's return. He chose to stand outside in the shadows, a lonely individual paralyzed with anger and jealousy. He interpreted the events as to how they effected him, which is the way we often respond to certain circumstances.

The older son was narrow and self-righteous. Even though he would receive the customary two-thirds, he was insecure and resentful of the good that came to his brother. There was no love in his creed and he refused to share his father's grief. This son was lost in the shadows of self-concern, jealousy, and anger. Grace was not a word or feeling in his everyday language and behavior.

A man in a conservative business suit approaches you in the bank. He tells you he is a bank examiner and needs your help to catch a dishonest teller. He wants you to withdraw your savings and give the money to him so he can check the serial numbers. DON'T COOPERATE.

The U.S. Department of Justice warns that if you do, you will never see the man or your money again. A real bank official would never tell you to make a withdrawal. The man who does is a con artist. His ploy is a common one.

A salesperson offers you a chance to buy land in a distant state at what seems like an irresistibly low price. A swimming pool, a private or membership in a community club is promised as part of the deal. Don't buy without carefully reading a property report.

What if that "choice lot" is actually nothing but useless sagebrush or swamp land, without even basic services like water and sewage disposal?

Protect yourself against this type of fraud by learning as much as you can about the property. Most land developers offering 50 lots or more for interstate sale are required by law to file a statement with the federal government, detailing available facilities in the area like schools and transportation, plus provisions for water and utilities and more.

They are also required to provide the same information to you, in the form of a property report. Don't sign anything until you have carefully read this document.

Frauds involving false charities also are widespread. Instead of helping people in need, your donation may only help line some crooked operator's pocket. If you're asked to give money to a charity you have never heard of, check the organization out carefully. Be especially cautious about donating to organizations with names that sound like well-known charities, but really are not quite the same.

Of course, it is always possible for even the most alert sensible ones among us to temporarily let our guard down and find that we've been "taken." If that should happen to you, don't be too embarrassed to report it immediately to the police.

Crop marketing discussion planned in Appomattox

By JAMES A. SMITH
Extension Agent

As we move into the '80's it seems to me that one of the major thrusts in agriculture must be in the area of marketing. For too long farmers have tended to "sell" their products. There are some alternatives for some products.

A couple weeks ago I talked with a friend in Pennsylvania; on the previous day he had marketed his soybeans. He said, "I'm thankful that I had a contract for $6.66 a bushel, because the cash market in our area is $5.56 per bushel.

Certainly $6.66 isn't a record breaker, but by using a contract one can frequently increase return.

Forward pricing suggests that one must know production costs and use good production practices.

We'll be talking about these grain marketing strategies Friday, January 28, 1:00 - 4:00 at the District Extension Office Auditorium - - come join us.

• • •

The 1982 Virginia Corn Performance Trails publication is available for your use. Stop by and pick up a copy. Some study can make you dollars by staying on top of the high producing varieties.

• • •

The Virginia Department of Agriculture produces brochures that are widely distributed relating to the sale of various farm products.

There is no charge for listing your operation in these publications. The up-coming 1983 direct marketing program and deadlines are as follows:

Lamb and Wool Guide - Jan. 21.
Berry and Vegetable Guide-Feb. 1
Directory of Virginia Farmers Markets - March 15

An application form needs to be completed. We have them in our office for your use.

• • •

There will be a Small Fruit School (brambles, berries and grapes) on February 7 and Tree Fruit School February 8 at the Salem-Roanoke County Civic Center. Program begins at 9 a.m. and concludes at 4 p.m.

If you plan to attend, we need to know by February 2.

• • •

The Southern Piedmont Area Forage Conference will be in Chatham Feb. 3. Copies of the program are available from our office.

• • •

Several weeks ago we talked about lice control in beef cattle and indicated that there were two materials, Lysoff and Dursban 44, that could be used.

Always read the labels before purchase and again before using. Dursban 44 is a good material when used in accordance with the label. There are a lot of "do nots" on the label - here are some of them, but not intended to be a complete listing.

- - Do not use with pesticide or drug having cholinesterase inhibiting activity within 45 days before or after treatment.
- - Do not hot brand animals when treating with Dursban 44 because solvent is combustible.
- - Do not treat bulls over 8 months of age.
- - Do not treat dairy cattle of any age.
- - Do not treat purebred continental or exotic breed cattle such as Simmental, Chianina, Charolais, Gelhvich.
- - Do not treat cows 21 days prior to or 14 days after calving.
- - Do not treat veal calves.
- - Do not treat beef-breed calves under 12 weeks of age.
- - Do not treat sick, convalescent or severly stressed cattle.
- - Do not treat for 10 days before or after shipping, dehorning, casteration or vaccination.
- - Do not slaughter animals within 14 days of initial treatment.
- - Do not retreat animals within less than 30 days.

NOTICE OF PROPOSED RULES GOVERNING EXPEDITED RATE INCREASES FILINGS BY ELECTRIC COOPERATIVES

The Virginia State Corporation Commission announced on December 17, 1982 new proposed rules which would govern requests for expedited rate increases sought by electric cooperatives. The proposed rules are designed to curb the financial deterioration currently being experienced by some cooperatives and to assist all Virginia cooperatives in obtaining, and maintaining, the capability to finance at the lowest cost to its members.

The proposals would allow the cooperatives to put in effect limited interim rate increases. Under the proposed rules, the increase is limited to 10% of annual revenues and further limited to the amount required to provide coverage of the interest on the cooperative's long term debt of no more than two and one-half times. In addition, the cooperative is limited to the ratemaking limitations established in prior rate cases in calculating the amount of increase. As a final safeguard, the rules provide that any increase which violates the rules will be refunded and that the cooperative may be precluded from filing for expedited rate relief for a prescribed period of time. Public notice of the increase is required on or before the date the rates are put in effect, and any customer may request to be heard by the Commission on the increase. Within six months of the date the increase goes into effect, the Commission's Staff will investigate the increase and file a report of its investigation. Other provisions of the proposed rules address the area of rate design and treatment of prior wholesale power cost increases.

The text of the proposed rules can be examined at the Commission's Document Control Center, Floor B1, Jefferson Building, Bank and Governor Streets, Richmond, Virginia and at the business offices of each cooperative where customer bills may be paid.

These proposed rules will be considered separately from the rules pending in Case No. PUE820056, which will be limited solely to investor-owned utilities.

Interested persons may submit written comments on the proposed rules on or before January 31, 1983, by writing William C. Young, Clerk, Virginia State Corporation Commission, P.O. Box 2118, Richmond, Virginia 23216 making reference to Case No. PUE820087. Any request to be heard orally must likewise be submitted. The Commission envisions that the final rules in this proceeding will become effective by March 1, 1983.
